9:35 a.m. Whole Group Discussion

Moderated by Carine Feyten, Chancellor, Texas Woman's University, CAC Chair

- What are anticipated disruptions and challenges that will need to be addressed to help workers adapt to the growing use of AI (e.g., time and cost associated with training, etc.)? How do we approach retraining and redeploying workers at risk of losing jobs because of AI?
 - How are colleges and universities preparing the future workforce for AI-related jobs?
- Please give an overview of current conditions in your industry or nonprofit sector and remark on whether you are seeing any change in demand for your services. If so, what's driving the change?
 - What changes, if any, have you seen from the employer side of the job market over the last six months (e.g. types of work/industries with more or less stress, changing skill/experience requirements for hiring, changing benefits or training offered to new hires)? What are you hearing from workers regarding their ability to find and keep work?

11:20 a.m. Young Workers in the Age of AI Presentation

Xiaohan Zhang, Senior Research Economist, Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas
